

The Women's March for America

January 21, 2017
Boston Common

All images © 2017 Allen Vander Meulen III, all rights reserved

Lincolmites waiting for the train

Women, men, older couples, young people, kids and their parents: all excited to go to the March. Unfortunately, the train was full and did not stop, leaving people scrambling to find ways to get in to the city. Many simply went home, disappointed.

Sen. Liz Warren Speaking

Sen. Ed Markey & Mayor Marty Walsh behind her

People climbing on to the Civil War Soldiers and Sailors Monument for a better view.

Many, many signs (like this one) were about caring for others and promoting peace and love.

People climbed trees to get a better view, kind of like Zaccheus! (Luke 19:1-10)

A variation of the LGBTQ+ "Rainbow" Flag
The pink triangles recall the symbols that homosexuals were forced to wear in Nazi Germany.

One of many signs voicing support for minorities of all sorts

Yes, Love does trump Hate. And, we are to love despite others' hate of us and our neighbors.

A Panoramic View of Boston Common

(Showing most of the 175,000 people who attended)

